CLAIM FALL-SINCLAIR JURY TAMPERED WITH

JUSTICE SIDDONS RECESSES THE CONSPIRACY TRIAL

CONSIDERS IN CHAMBERS AFFIDAVITS CHARGING JURY TAMPERING

PROSECUTION LAWYER SAYS MATTER SUBMITTED "OF GRAVEST CONCERN"

By HERBERT LITTLE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Nov. 1.—(UP)—Justice Siddons recessed the Fall-Sinclair oil conspiracy trial at opening of court today and went to his chambers to receive affidavits charging jury tampering.

Attorneys for the government and defense and the court stenographer only were present at the conference, which might result in a mistrial being declared.

Former Sen. Pomerene, prosecution lawyer, announced in court that the matter he was submitting was "of the gravest concern," and Justice Siddons decided to hear it in secret.

Harry F. Sinclair and Albert B. Fall, charged with conspiracy to defraud the government in the Teapot Dome lease, remained quietly in the court room.

In case a re-trial is ordered, it is believed, Justice Siddons will order the new proceeding to begin immediately.

Sinclair a few minutes later was summoned to Siddons' chamber. He went in accompanied by one of his lawyers.

George Chandler, assistant government counsel, came out of the conference smiling at 10:35 and returned with assistant District Attorney Shea, who, with Neil Burkshaw, obtained the four affidavits under consideration by Siddons.

Shea and Burkshaw each made one of the affidavits which were to be made public later in the day.

It was reported several detectives and justice department agents were about the court house, by request of the government, and that they had been very active in operations over the week-end.

The two women and 10 men of the jury chatted apparently at ease in the court vestibule as the meeting continued.

Meanwhile, it was rumored the grand jury would be called to act if Justice Siddons found the charges as grave as stated by Pomerene.

Tampering with a jury is one of the most serious charges; an indictment on such a charge might include bribery and obstruction of justice; and in addition the presiding judge might jail responsible persons for criminal contempt.

The conference in Siddons' chambers was still continuing at 10:50 A. M.

Washington, Nov. 1.—The Fall-Sinclair case was adjourned this afternoon until tomorrow to permit Justice Siddons further to consider jury tampering charges laid before him this forenoon.

Tomorrow, it was anticipated, he will probably declare a mistrial. Siddons at 1:30 P. M. reconvened the court after a dramatic forenoon consultation with attorneys and others over the secret tampering charges. He announced he wished to consider these startling claims this afternoon and tonight.

The affidavits in the case were made public after the adjournment. They revealed that hour by hour surveillance of jurors had been kept. This evidence was revealed by a raid on the Burns Detective Agency.

The government lawyers let it be known that if Justice Siddons declared a mistrial, they would be ready to proceed with selection of a new jury for a new trial at once. In this case, however, they would insist the jury be locked up instead of given freedom during trial progress as the present jurors were.

Four affidavits had been presented to the judge. Jury tampering was among the charges. This in itself is such a grave offense that a conviction resulting from it carries one year in prison or $1,000 fine or both. Conspiracy to tamper with a jury if proven means six years or $5,000 fine or both.

Washington, Nov. 1.—The Fall-Sinclair conspiracy trial was adjourned this afternoon to tomorrow.

Los Angeles, Nov. 1.—(UP)—Attacking technical phases of her trial, attorneys for Dorothy Mackaye, former stage star, have filed a brief in appellate court asking reversal of her conviction on a charge of compounding a felony.

Meantime, sensational affidavits, supporting these charges were made public.

The affidavits, made by two assistant United States attorneys and two other men, showed the following:

1. Edward J. Kidwell, juror No. 11, a leatherworker, said he expected to get an automobile "as long as a block" if Fall and Sinclair were not convicted.

2. That 14 or 15 men of the Burns Detective Agency of New York had the jurors under hour by hour surveillance since the trial started.

3. That an important raid was made on the Washington headquarters of the Burns Detective Agency in which the local manager and three operatives were caught, and complete reports of the surveillance were seized.

4. That Kidwell told of dice or poker games being played in the jury room during recesses of the trial.

The affidavits were made by Neil Burkshaw and Walter M. Shea, assistant United States attorneys; J. Ray Peters, a street car conductor, and Don Key King.

Miss Elder has rejected the offer that she fly to America as the passenger of a French aviator. At the same time Capt. Haldeman turned down a proposition that he should fly to the United States with a French girl as passenger.

"It's too late to fly the ocean this season," explained Haldeman. "And moreover, if I ever try it again I hope it will be with Ruth Elder."

The co-pilots of the plane American Girl were to visit the chateau at Versailles today, and to dine with Maurice Bokanowsky, minister of commerce and aviation.

Abel was the object of a search by police and federal authorities last week, when he failed to report to headquarters after being in the vicinity of Little Falls, Brainerd and St. Cloud conducting investigations. He was thought to have met with foul play.

It was learned that Abel and a Little Falls man had occupied a cabin at Crow Wing lake, and that Abel had been drinking, police said. When federal authorities from St. Paul started a personal investigation, Abel eluded them. He was arrested in downtown Little Falls by police, and the charge of driving an automobile while drunk was lodged against him.

HOUSE WAYS AND MEANS BODY OBJECTS

GREEN AND GARNER EXPRESS
DISPLEASURE WITH PRO-
POSED REDUCTION

MELLON PLAN MAY BE USED AS
BASIS FOR NEW TAX
CUT

Washington, Nov. 1.—(UP)—The new Mellon plan for a cautious tax reduction met strong objection in the house ways and means committee today.

Both republican Chairman Green of Iowa and Rep. Garner, democrat, Texas, ranking minority member, expressed displeasure with the $225,000,000 cut as proposed by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon at opening of the committee hearing yesterday.

This indicated the Mellon plan might be used as a basis for the new tax reduction, but would be materially changed.

Both Green and Garner, as house tax leaders of the opposing factions in congress, favor the Mellon scheme of reducing corporations taxes. Garner, however, feels corporation levies should be decreased from 13 1/2 per cent to 10 per cent instead of 12 per cent as Mellon proposed.

Green told the United Press he objected to the Mellon proposal for eliminating the federal estate tax. He also indicated he might go further than Mellon wishes in total reduction.

Washington, Nov. 1.—An appeal for reduction of corporation taxes to a level equalizing them with individual income rates was made to the house ways and means committee tax reduction hearing today by Jas. A. Emery, Washington, D. C., representative of the National Association of Manufacturers.

He declared the present 13 1/2 per cent rates on corporation incomes work a general injustice and that reduction of the rate would give the widest social benefits.

Emery urged the committee to build the entire new tax reduction bill, now being framed, around a reduction in the corporation levy.

Meantime, after calling at the White House today, Sen. Simmons, North Carolina, ranking minority member of the senate finance committee, declared he regarded Secretary Mellon's $225,000,000 tax cut proposal "entirely too low." He felt $400,000,000 would be a proper figure and indicated he would lead a fight to reduce corporation and tobacco taxes, and then proceed until the so-called nuisance taxes here been "wiped off the slate." He felt, too, that automobile taxes should be reduced if not eliminated.

He predicted "quite a fight" on taxes the coming session, though not as serious as in the last two sessions.

St. Paul, Nov. 1.—Minnesota taxpayers will save approximately $600,000 annually if the tax revision plan proposed by Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury, is adopted, according to M. L. Wilcutts, St. Paul, collector of internal revenue for the state. Wilcutts also estimated that the proposed reduction in the corporation tax from 13 1/2 to 12 per cent would mean an approximate annual saving of $250,000 to Minnesota corporations.

Wilcutts, however, refused to comment upon the savings which would result to taxpayers from placing corporations with incomes less than $25,000 annually on the same basis with partnerships. He said he thought the savings would be tremendous, but declared he was unprepared to make an estimate.

CANADA'S MOST SPECTACULAR MURDER TRIAL

EARLE NELSON, "THE GORILLA
MAN," FACES MURDER
CHARGES

ASSERTED HE IS "STRANGLER"
RESPONSIBLE FOR DEATHS
OF 20 WOMEN

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 1.—(UP)—What promises to be one of Canada's most spectacular murder trials opened here today when Earle Nelson, "the Gorilla Man," faced charges of murdering Mrs. Emily Patterson.

Nelson is believed to be the "strangler" who is responsible for the deaths of 20 or more women in various cities of the United States.

Since his arrest he has maintained silence and before the trial opened today there was no indication as to what defense would be offered.

Nelson was said to have escaped from the Napa hospital for the criminal insane in California four years ago, and it was believed insanity might be his defense.

The crime with which Nelson is charged was one of the most brutal in Manitoba's history. Mrs. Patterson was found strangled to death and badly beaten.

Nelson also faces murder charges in connection with the death of Lola Cowan, a young girl found dead under circumstances similar to those surrounding the Patterson crime.

It was believed here that Nelson may be responsible for strangulations in San Francisco, Detroit, Seattle, Portland, and other American cities.

TO ALLOW THE OPPOSING ROADS TO PREPARE CASE

WHEN HEARING RECONVENES,
MILWAUKEE ROAD WILL PRE-
SENT EVIDENCE

WESTERN COMMUNITIES ASK
ONE OR MORE HEARINGS BE
HELD IN THEIR SECTIONS

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 1.—(UP)—The interstate commerce commission hearing on the Northern Pacific-Great Northern railroad merger will adjourn for thirty days at a date not yet decided, to allow railroads opposing the proposed unification to prepare their evidence.

The decision was handed down today by Director Charles D. Mahaffie of the commission, following arguments of counsel for the roads opposing the merger, and opponents of the adjournment plan.

In announcing the adjournment decision, Director Mahaffie asked that all evidence possible be presented at the present hearing. When the hearing reconvenes, objecting railroads of which the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road is leading one, will present their case.

Frederick H. Wood, counsel for the St. Paul road argued in favor of the adjournment motion, while Walker D. Hines, special eastern counsel for the Great Northern, objected to a delay in proceedings.

Ivan Bowen, member of the Minnesota state railroad commission, in a statement pointed out that if a saving of $10,000,000 a year is made by the unification going forward, there should be an investigation into freight rates, with a view of effecting a reduction.

Representatives of western communities which will be affected by the merger today made a formal request to the federal commission that one or more hearings be set for their section of the country, so that the public interest there could be shown in the testimony.

Following the testimony of a number of western witnesses today, it is expected that Ralph Budd, president of the Great Northern, and Charles Donnelly, president of the Northern Pacific, will testify.

By adopting the report of an investigating committee, the St. Paul city council today joined the ranks of cities opposing the proposed merger. The report declared that the merger would have a "bad" effect on the city.

Washington, Nov. 1.—(UP)—Justice Siddons recessed the Fall-Sinclair oil conspiracy trial at opening of court today and went to his chambers to receive affidavits charging jury tampering.

Attorneys for the government and defense and the court stenographer only were present at the conference, which might result in a mistrial being declared.

Former Sen. Pomerene, prosecution lawyer, announced in court that the matter he was submitting was "of the gravest concern," and Justice Siddons decided to hear it in secret.

HOUSE WAYS AND MEANS BODY OBJECTS

GREEN AND GARNER EXPRESS
DISPLEASURE WITH PRO-
POSED REDUCTION

MELLON PLAN MAY BE USED AS
BASIS FOR NEW TAX
CUT

Washington, Nov. 1.—(UP)—The new Mellon plan for a cautious tax reduction met strong objection in the house ways and means committee today.

Both republican Chairman Green of Iowa and Rep. Garner, democrat, Texas, ranking minority member, expressed displeasure with the $225,000,000 cut as proposed by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon at opening of the committee hearing yesterday.

This indicated the Mellon plan might be used as a basis for the new tax reduction, but would be materially changed.

Both Green and Garner, as house tax leaders of the opposing factions in congress, favor the Mellon scheme of reducing corporations taxes. Garner, however, feels corporation levies should be decreased from 13½ per cent to 10 per cent instead of 12 per cent as Mellon proposed.

Green told the United Press he objected to the Mellon proposal for eliminating the federal estate tax. He also indicated he might go further than Mellon wishes in total reduction.

Washington, Nov. 1.—An appeal for reduction of corporation taxes to a level equalizing them with individual income rates was made to the house ways and means committee tax reduction hearing today by Jas. A. Emery, Washington, D. C., representative of the National Association of Manufacturers.

He declared the present 13½ per cent rates on corporation incomes work a general injustice and that reduction of the rate would give the widest social benefits.

Emery urged the committee to build the entire new tax reduction bill, now being framed, around a reduction in the corporation levy.

Meantime, after calling at the White House today, Sen. Simmons, North Carolina, ranking minority member of the senate finance committee, declared he regarded Secretary Mellon's $225,000,000 tax cut proposal "entirely too low." He felt $400,000,000 would be a proper figure and indicated he would lead a fight to reduce corporation and tobacco taxes, and then proceed until the so-called nuisance taxes here been "wiped off the slate." He felt, too, that automobile taxes should be reduced if not eliminated.

He predicted "quite a fight" on taxes the coming session, though not as serious as in the last two sessions.

St. Paul, Nov. 1.—Minnesota taxpayers will save approximately $600,000 annually if the tax revision plan proposed by Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury, is adopted, according to M. L. Wilcutts, St. Paul, collector of internal revenue for the state. Wilcutts also estimated that the proposed reduction in the corporation tax from 13½ to 12 per cent would mean an approximate annual saving of $250,000 to Minnesota corporations.

Wilcutts, however, refused to comment upon the savings which would result to taxpayers from placating corporations with incomes less than $25,000 annually on the same basis with partnerships. He said he thought the savings would be tremendous, but declared he was unprepared to make an estimate.

CANADA'S MOST SPECTACULAR MURDER TRIAL

EARLE NELSON, "THE GORILLA
MAN," FACES MURDER
CHARGES

ASSERTED HE IS "STRANGLER"
RESPONSIBLE FOR DEATHS
OF 20 WOMEN

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 1.—(UP)—What promises to be one of Canada's most spectacular murder trials opened here today when Earle Nelson, "the Gorilla Man," faced charges of murdering Mrs. Emily Patterson.

Nelson is believed to be the "strangler" who is responsible for the deaths of 20 or more women in various cities of the United States.

Since his arrest he has maintained silence and before the trial opened today there was no indication as to what defense would be offered.

Nelson was said to have escaped from the Napa hospital for the criminal insane in California four years ago, and it was believed insanity might be his defense.

The crime with which Nelson is charged was one of the most brutal in Manitoba's history. Mrs. Patterson was found strangled to death and badly beaten.

Nelson also faces murder charges in connection with the death of Lola Cowan, a young girl found dead under circumstances similar to those surrounding the Patterson crime.

It was believed here that Nelson may be responsible for strangulations in San Francisco, Detroit, Seattle, Portland, and other American cities.

TO ALLOW THE OPPOSING ROADS TO PREPARE CASE

WHEN HEARING RECONVENES,
MILWAUKEE ROAD WILL PRE-
SENT EVIDENCE

WESTERN COMMUNITIES ASK
ONE OR MORE HEARINGS BE
HELD IN THEIR SECTIONS

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 1.—(UP)—The interstate commerce commission hearing on the Northern Pacific-Great Northern railroad merger will adjourn for thirty days at a date not yet decided, to allow railroads opposing the proposed unification to prepare their evidence.

The decision was handed down today by Director Charles D. Mahaffie of the commission, following arguments of counsel for the roads opposing the merger, and opponents of the adjournment plan.

In announcing the adjournment decision, Director Mahaffie asked that all evidence possible be presented at the present hearing. When the hearing reconvenes, objecting railroads of which the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road is leading one, will present their case.

Frederick H. Wood, counsel for the St. Paul road argued in favor of the adjournment motion, while Walker D. Hines, special eastern counsel for the Great Northern, objected to a delay in proceedings.

Ivan Bowen, member of the Minnesota state railroad commission, in a statement pointed out that if a saving of $10,000,000 a year is made by the unification going forward, there should be an investigation into freight rates, with a view of effecting a reduction.

Representatives of western communities which will be affected by the merger today made a formal request to the federal commission that one or more hearings be set for their section of the country, so that the public interest there could be shown in the testimony.

Following the testimony of a number of western witnesses today, it is expected that Ralph Budd, President of the Great Northern, and Charles Donnelly, president of the Northern Pacific, will testify.

By adopting the report of an investigating committee, the St. Paul city council today joined the ranks of cities opposing the proposed merger. The report declared that the merger would have a "bad" effect on the city.

KANSAS REPUBLICANS BACK SENATOR CURTIS

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 1.—(UP)—"Kansas republicans will back Senator Curtis to the limit for the nomination to the presidency," declared Arthur Capper, junior senator from Kansas and colleague of Curtis, who passed through here last night.

Capper was on his way to St. Louis to attend a conference today on farm problems by leaders in the middle west.

"Senator Curtis is well liked in Washington where he had made many friends in his thirty years service in congress and the senate," said Capper. "I believe he will have as strong a following in the middle western and western states as any of the men yet mentioned in connection with the nomination."

PHILIPPINE PROBLEM TO BE THRESHED OUT

The Greek e in the body of a word or in small letters at the end of a word is evidence of a soul searching out for betterment—for learning for improvement. WINTER MAY BE CLOSE AT HAND

(By United Press)

Ranging from a hard fall in northern Minnesota to occasional flakes in rain in the southern part of the state, the arrival of snow today gave warning that winter is close at hand.

The rain at St. Paul was accompanied by lightning.

From Winnipeg came reports that the mercury had fallen from 48 degrees last night to 37 this morning, and snow began falling shortly after dawn.

At International Falls there was a heavy fall. The temperature stood above the freezing mark and the snow melted as it fell.

At St. Paul and points south in Minnesota the rain threatened throughout the day to turn to snow as the temperature dropped.

Fair and cooler weather is predicted for Minnesota tonight.

'GENTLEMAN BANDIT' IS FOUND GUILTY

Minneapolis, Nov. 1.—(U.P.)—It took a jury in district court less than ten minutes today to find George La Belle, Minneapolis' "gentleman bandit," guilty of first degree robbery.

La Belle during his trial was identified by three witnesses as the bandit who last January held up employees of the E. B. Crabtree Co., taking $4 from Charles A. Miller.

Because of prior convictions on a criminal charge, La Belle, when he is sentenced late today, may be sent to the Stillwater prison to serve from 10 to 20 years under the Minnesota Baumes law.

GIRL FOUND INJURED ON DAKOTA COUNTY ROAD

St. Paul, Nov. 1.—(U.P.)—Police sought to identify a girl who refused to give her name after she was found injured in the road near the Dakota county end of the Mendota bridge early today.

At the city hospital her body cuts and bruises were dressed, and she was placed under police guard pending an investigation.

The girl, who appears to be about 20 years old, steadfastly refused to tell how she happened to be lying in the road. From the nature of her injuries, it was apparent, police said, that she either leaped or was thrown from a moving automobile.

Million Disaster Victims Aided by Red Cross in Year of Great Calamities

NEARLY a million persons, victims of 77 disasters have received assistance from the American Red Cross during the past year.

On an average of every five days this country suffered a disaster of sufficient magnitude to bring the Red Cross into action. The amount of money the organization spent in meeting these emergencies is greater than the budgets of twenty-six states, while only six cities in the country have a population larger than the number of disaster sufferers assisted.

Floods raging over thousands of miles, fires destroying whole villages, tornadoes and hurricanes sweeping over entire states, and death dealing explosions combined to make the year one of unprecedented calamities.

The outstanding disaster of the year was the Mississippi Valley flood, where the organization assisted more than 607,000 persons during the emergency period, and is still carrying on extensive reconstruction work. Already rehabilitation aid has been given to nearly 500,000 persons. After rescuing those in danger from levees and house tops, the refugee population was fed, clothed and sheltered in 149 refugee camps. As these people returned to their homes they were supplied with live stock, seed and farm implements, while buildings damaged or destroyed by the flood were replaced. In this disaster the Red Cross is expending a relief fund in excess of $17,000,000.

Red Cross leaders state that increasing responsibilities in the field of disaster relief has necessitated a larger membership. The organization, headed by President Coolidge, has set 5,000,000 members as its goal for this year's Roll Call, which will be held throughout the nation between Armistice Day and Thanksgiving.

MAYOR HODGSON CRITICIZES HISTORY TEACHING IN ST. PAUL

St. Paul, Nov. 1.—(U.P.)—The history-teaching methods and subject matter in St. Paul schools were placed under fire here today by L. R. S. Ferguson, commissioner of education.

The inquiry follows a severe criticism of history teaching by Mayor L. C. Hodgson of St. Paul, in a message to William Hale Thompson, mayor of Chicago, offering support of the Chicago executive's "America First" foundation, a national organization for better citizenship.

INVESTIGATE DEATH OF MAN IN CELL

St. Paul, Nov. 1.—(U.P.)—County and city authorities investigated the death of Ben Frisk, St. Paul, who died in a cell at the city jail early today where he had been removed after having a scalp wound treated at the city hospital.

Frisk was found lying injured in a street. He was taken to the hospital, where what proved to be a superficial scalp wound was dressed. Police declared Frisk was drunk and ordered him held in the city jail. Within an hour after being locked up, the prisoner was dead.

WOMAN GOT DRUNK SO SHE COULD SEE SPOUSE IN WORKHOUSE

St. Paul, Nov. 1.—(U.P.)—Mrs. Mary Steele wanted to see her husband, Bill, who is serving a workhouse sentence for drunkenness.

She couldn't get in to see him any other way, so she drank until she was drunk, then begged a policeman to arrest her. He did.

Mary admitted before Judge Finehout that she took one too many just so she would be sentenced to the workhouse to see Bill.

Judge Finehout was accommodating to the extent that he granted Mary her wish—a workhouse sentence—but it wasn't at the same workhouse that Bill is serving his sentence. But Mary didn't know that until she was behind the bars. Bill and Mary have been married eight years.

HARD TO GET MEN ON KNEES

St. Paul, Nov. 1.—(U.P.)—It is easier to raise a million dollars for church purposes than to get half a dozen men on their knees before God, Rev. A. B. Anderson of the Lutheran Bible Institute told a congregation here.

Explaining his statement, Rev. Anderson said that church members are more willing to give money to the church than to repent for their sins. He denounced the modern tendency to repent by giving financial assistance.

FAVOR BOND ISSUE FOR HARD SURFACED ROADS

PEOPLE from 200 communities on Trunk Highway No. 7 met at Tracy last month and adopted resolutions favoring a bond issue for hard surfaced roads. The resolutions said in part:

"It has been demonstrated that hard surfaced roads will meet the situation and result in the saving of millions of dollars annually to the owners of automobiles and trucks. Also, the paving of highways will reduce the cost of their maintenance and further result in a large saving to the people of Minnesota, prove an immeasurable convenience to the farmer, the business man, and the tourist from away who picks out Minnesota as his pleasure spot.

"This is an age of progress coupled with economy. Recognizing those principles, No. 7 Highway Association places itself on record as strongly favoring the Babcock road program, including the issuance of $20,000,000 in bonds that must be used for the purpose of furthering construction of hard surfaced highways in Minnesota.

"That the issuance of bonds will not be a mortgage on real estate and personal property of the taxpayer, that the plan suggested by Commissioner Babcock is business like and will involve no hardship on the taxpaying public but in the last analysis the citizenry of the North Star State will become the beneficiaries of a wise and economical program for road building.

NO MORE "LIFT BEGGARS"

A BULLETIN of more than ordinary interest is one recently sent out by the State Highway Department which calls attention to putting an end to the "lift beggars" menace.

A campaign to stamp out the practice of children begging for rides is being pushed by the American Automobile association. The practice of children asking for lifts is one of the greatest menaces to child safety that exists today, says a statement by the organization. "The appeal of the child, this one like all others, is hard to resist but the interests of safety demand that the motorist be firm in his refusal to accede to it."

Every time a motorist gives a child a lift, he encourages the child to continue asking for rides. At first he may stand on the curb, but gradually he becomes more daring, says the statement. He will crowd out into the stream of vehicles, becoming a menace to himself and others.

The Minnesota law makes it a misdemeanor to stand in the traveled portion of a street or highway to solicit rides, except from a public conveyance.

EXAMINING OUR TEXTBOOKS

ALL this furore started by Mayor Thompson of Chicago regarding the Americanization of school text books on American history may have some merit or not, but if it induces a lot of school boards and parents to peruse the books taken up in schools, it will have served a useful purpose.

We remember reading a geography which related that Brainerd is the shipping point for blueberries and flour and manufactures a lot of lumber. All of which refers to the pioneer days when Indians roamed the outskirts, when sawmills dotted the plain south of the court house and when we did have a mill that ground more than ordinary feed.

No one will deny that we have had a lot of muckraking histories of American celebrities published recently which made some idols look sere and yellow.

AIR CONFERENCE IN CHICAGO

A NATIONAL Airports Conference is to be held at the Hotel Sherman in Chicago on December 12 to 15, for the purpose of arranging for the construction of landing fields in all progressive cities.

Mayor Frank E. Little of our city has been invited to attend. Mayor Thompson desires that Chicago use her unlimited resources to establish passenger, express and mail air service with all American cities, but this service is now impossible because of lack of landing fields in many towns.

Adequate air connections for Brainerd must be established while the country is being charted. If we do nothing, we shall miss being attached to an airline and will sit on the sidelines watching the rest of the world fly by.

Hannibal

A LITTLE boy, nine years old, stood before a reeking heathen altar one day in 238 B. C. and, at his father's dictation, swore a solemn oath—an oath that was destined to change the fortunes of the world and to cost a half million lives.

The boy was Hannibal, one of the greatest military geniuses of history. His father, Hamilcar, was a famous Carthaginian general. His three fierce sons were known as "the Lion's Brood." Carthage, a sovereign city, whose domains extended for hundreds of miles, was situated on the north coast of Africa, near modern Tunis. It was settled by Phoenicians and rose to pre-eminent commercial and educational greatness. In 246 B. C. Carthage clashed with Rome over the possession of Sicily. This is known as the First Punic or (Phoenician) war. Rome won.

Hamilcar made his nine-year-old son, Hannibal, swear eternal enmity to Rome; then took him on a campaign against Spain. The boy grew up in camps and, at the age of twenty-six, was made commander-in-chief of the Carthaginian armies. His first act of power was to set about fulfilling his childish oath. With this in view he completed the conquest of Spain, meaning to use that country as a base of supplies in his proposed war with Rome.

He then picked a quarrel with Rome's allies at Saguntum and stormed their city. This brought forth a prompt protest from the Romans, and in 219 B. C. the Second Punic war was on. The next spring Hannibal crossed the Pyrenees with 112,000 men and 37 war elephants, sweeping all hostile tribes before him like chaff. Before reaching what is now France, on his march to Italy, Hannibal weeded out his ranks, sending back all except the bravest, hardest men. This cut down his former vast army to less than 30,000. But he knew that in such a campaign as he planned it was quality, not quantity, that counted. He crossed the Rhone, eluding the Roman army sent to stop him, and reached the Alps. The passage of this range of mountains involved tremendous work. The track was impassable for his elephants, and the snows and bitter cold chilled his Africans and Spaniards to the bone. He cleared a road, blasting rocks, it is said, with a preparation of vinegar, and transported his whole army over into northern Italy in 15 days.

Publius Scipio, the Roman consul, again barred his way, but was badly beaten in a battle near Vercelli. At this conflict the consul's seventeen-year-old son, later known to history as "Scipio Africanus," fought his first battle. The Romans, reinforced to 40,000, again attacked Hannibal and again were beaten. The Carthaginian, in the spring of 217 B. C., lured a great Roman army into a trap in a mountain defile near Lake Trasimene and mastered them. Rome, agitated at the invader's progress, chose Fabius Maximus, nicknamed "the Delayer," for general-in-chief. Fabius would risk no general engagement with his terrible foe, but pursued a course of masterly inactivity that has since become known in warfare as "Fabian tactics."

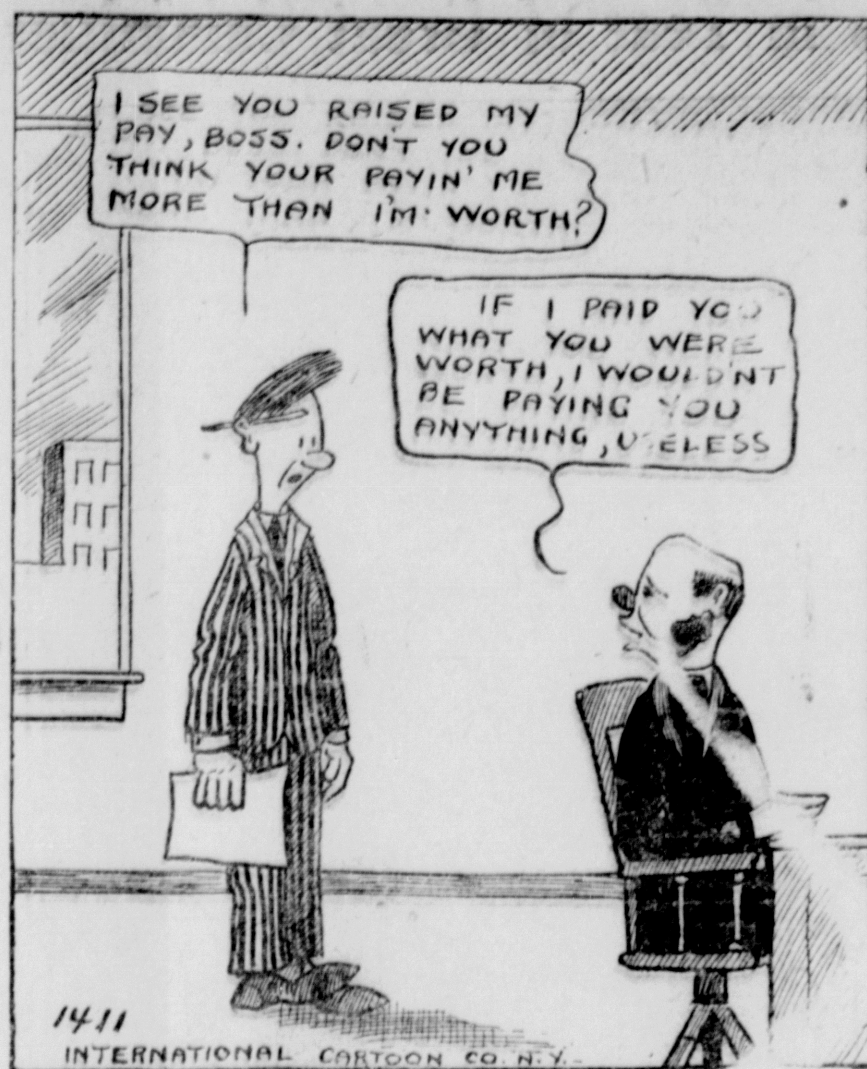

After winning northern Italy Hannibal the following spring encountered a Roman army 80,000 strong (far larger than his own) near Cannae and literally cut it to pieces. Onward towards the city of Rome itself Hannibal advanced. None dared to oppose him. He held Rome and all Italy in the hollow of his hand. The road to Rome was clear. But, instead of continuing to the city itself, he foolishly went into winter quarters at Capua. When spring came, Hannibal's great chance was gone. Rome was ready for him. His once invincible army was now a dissolute, overfed horde.

True, for years later he ravaged Italy, once encamping within three miles of Rome and sending his skirmishing parties up to the very gates of the city. But never again did he succeed in placing the enemy wholly at his mercy. His star was on the decline. Yet even then no Roman general dared attack him, for in all his 15 years of invasion he was never personally defeated in battle. The younger Scipio hit on a plan to rid Italy of the terrible foe. He crossed with an army into Carthaginian territory, thus carrying the war into Africa. Carthage, being menaced, sent in haste for Hannibal to protect his home city, and he left Italy never to return. Hannibal, with an inferior force, met Scipio at Zama, Africa, and for the first time in his life was beaten. This defeat ended the Second Punic war. Carthage was, for the time, crushed.

Hannibal turned his attention to statesmanship, with such success that within a very few years he had built up Carthage's shattered finances and power. Rome, still dreading him, demanded his surrender. Sooner than involve his country in another war Hannibal voluntarily went into exile. But wherever he went Rome's hatred pursued him.

At last, brought to bay and knowing what treatment he might expect from the relentless Romans, Hannibal sucked poison from a ring he always wore, and once more battled his lifelong foes by dying before they could capture him.

MONUMENT FOR BLUE LICKS BATTLEFIELD

To Mark Site of Great Fight With Indians.

Carlisle, Ky.—Announcement is made by the Blue Licks Battlefield Monument commission, of which I. B. Ross of this city is secretary-treasurer, that a 40-foot high obelisk will be erected at Blue Licks, this county, where on August 19, 1782, the bloodiest battle between Indians and whites known to the "Dark and Bloody Ground" which became Kentucky was fought. Ten thousand dollars has already been voted for the monument to the early 200 pioneers who fell, dead or wounded, that day, and the memorial will be completed by August 19, next year, the one hundred forty-sixth anniversary of the battle, in which were slain or injured more men than any other general battle found in records of Indian days in this section of the country.

The obelisk will be of as severe a simplicity as the lives of the men it will commemorate. The shaft will be surmounted by the figure of a Kentucky pioneer, leaning on the famous long rifle which was introduced to the West by Daniel Boone and who fought at the Battle of Blue Licks.

The figure will face toward the Ohio river, across which finally fled the Indians after practically decimating the pioneer forces. So far as recalled here, the Battle of the Little Big Horn in which Custer and his men were massacred is the only one that approaches it in annals of Indian warfare.

Blue Licks, where the conflict occurred, is near the site of Blue Lick Springs, which 75 years ago was a watering place tying with Saratoga in popularity.

The site where the battle occurred has been overrun with weeds and all manner of underbrush, but in recent months some attention has been paid to it and it has been cleaned.

Rich finds in Indian arrowheads and tomahawks have been made there on the ground of the fight beneath which still sleep some of the pioneers killed that day. A great celebration was held there August 19, the one hundred forty-sixth anniversary of the battle, when tribute was paid to the settlers who fell there, and ceremonies dedicating the field to the memorial purpose took place.

FAVOR BOND ISSUE FOR HARD SURFACED ROADS

PEOPLE from 200 communities on Trunk Highway No. 7 met at Tracy last month and adopted resolutions favoring a bond issue for hard surfaced roads. The resolutions said in part:

"It has been demonstrated that hard surfaced roads will meet the situation and result in the saving of millions of dollars annually to the owners of automobiles and trucks. Also, the paving of highways will reduce the cost of their maintenance and further result in a large saving to the people of Minnesota, prove an immeasurable convenience to the farmer, the business man, and the tourist from away who picks out Minnesota as his pleasure spot.

"This is an age of progress coupled with economy. Recognizing those principles, No. 7 Highway Association places itself on record as strongly favoring the Babcock road program, including the issuance of $20,000,000 in bonds that must be used for the purpose of furthering construction of hard surfaced highways in Minnesota.

"That the issuance of bonds will not be a mortgage on real estate and personal property of the taxpayer, that the plan suggested by Commissioner Babcock is business like and will involve no hardship on the taxpaying public but in the last analysis the citizenry of the North Star State will become the beneficiaries of a wise and economical program for road building.

NO MORE "LIFT BEGGARS"

A BULLETIN of more than ordinary interest is one recently sent out by the State Highway Department which calls attention to putting an end to the "lift beggars" menace.

A campaign to stamp out the practice of children begging for rides is being pushed by the American Automobile association. The practice of children asking for lifts is one of the greatest menaces to child safety that exists today, says a statement by the organization. "The appeal of the child, this one like all others, is hard to resist but the interests of safety demand that the motorist be firm in his refusal to accede to it."

Every time a motorist gives a child a lift, he encourages the child to continue asking for rides. At first he may stand on the curb, but gradually he becomes more daring, says the statement. He will crowd out into the stream of vehicles, becoming a menace to himself and others.

The Minnesota law makes it a misdemeanor to stand in the traveled portion of a street or highway to solicit rides, except from a public conveyance.

EXAMINING OUR TEXTBOOKS

ALL this furore started by Mayor Thompson of Chicago regarding the Americanization of school text books on American history may have some merit or not, but if it induces a lot of school boards and parents to peruse the books taken up in schools, it will have served a useful purpose.

We remember reading a geography which related that Brainerd is the shipping point for blueberries and flour and manufactures a lot of lumber. All of which refers to the pioneer days when Indians roamed the outskirts, when sawmills dotted the plain south of the court house and when we did have a mill that ground more than ordinary feed.

No one will deny that we have had a lot of muckraking histories of American celebrities published recently which made some idols look sere and yellow.

WELL ROUNDED FOOTBALL TEAMS WIN MOST VICTORIES

MORE CONSISTENT THAN TEAMS BUILT ABOUT THE STARS

FACT IS EVIDENT AS 1927 SEASON ENTERS LAST FEW WEEKS

TEAMS COACHED BY ZUPPKE AND ROCKNE DEMONSTRATE TEAM-WORK

By CLARK B. KELSEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Chicago, Nov. 1.—Well rounded football teams without outstanding stars turn in more victories than eleven built about star players, it was evident today as the 1927 season entered its last weeks.

The teams coached by Bob Zuppke and Knute Rockne have demonstrated the success of team-work as opposed to offensives built around star players.

Replacements in Illinois and Notre Dame line-ups have showed substitutes playing as well as the men replaced.

Without reserves capable of filling stars' shoes, four Big Ten teams have been tied or defeated this season. Minnesota without Herb Joesling was able to get out only a 14 to 14 tie with Indiana. Without "Tiny" Lewis, fullback, Waldo Fisher, end, or "Skeeter" Wyman, center, Northwestern, a potentially strong team, was beaten by Illinois and Missouri on successive Saturdays. With Gilbert on the sidelines, Michigan was helpless before Illinois although Bennie Oosterbaan was in the Wolverine line-up. And Purdue with Capt. Cotton Wilcox on the sidelines till the final minutes of the game, bowed to Chicago's team strength.

While both Illinois and Notre Dame have stellar players, none stands head and shoulders above his mates. Reserve strength is present in plenty on both teams, and injuries are not serious handicaps because substitutes are ready to take up where regulars left off.

Another conclusion drawn during the present is that the Big Ten and Missouri Valley conferences are playing about the same caliber of football. Wisconsin and Minnesota trounced Kansas and Oklahoma Aggies, respectively. Northwestern and Chicago of the Big Ten bowed before Missouri and Oklahoma, while Illinois played a tie game with Iowa State of Ames.

Another change in football status is the absence of "soft spots" on western conference schedules. For many years Indiana, Purdue and Northwestern were considered "coasting" periods of the schedule. Any of these schools today is capable of battling the first division leaders on almost even terms.

SPIDER KELLY DIES AT ROCHESTER TODAY

Rochester, Minn., Nov. 1.—(UP)—Spider Kelly, of San Francisco, retired fighter, died at Mayo Brothers hospital here early today, following an operation for removal of a mastoid. He was 55 years old, and retired from the ring 27 years ago, making his home on the west coast.

Kelly, whose real name was James Patrick Curtin, was a native of Ireland. He gained national fame in his 25-round fight with Joe Gans in New York City, in which judges gave Kelly the edge in 17 rounds.

Kelly had suffered several years with the mastoid trouble, and it was upon the advice of friends that he entered the Mayo hospital here a week ago and submitted to the operation. His condition was considered serious immediately after he left the operating room, it was stated here today, although his presence in the hospital was not made public.

BOUT WILL SETTLE NOTHING IN PARTICULAR

NO TITLE TO BE AT STAKE. MEN WILL BOX AT CATCHWEIGHTS

FIGHT PROMISES TO BE A CONTEST OF GOOD RIGHT HANDS

By BERT M. DENBY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Chicago, Nov. 1.—Mickey Walker, world's middleweight champion, tonight goes out of his class to meet Mike McTigue, former light heavyweight title holder, in a bout which will settle nothing in particular, but promises to be one of Chicago's most colorful fist attractions.

No title will be at stake and the men will box at catchweights.

For Walker, the fight will furnish an indication of what he may expect if he carries through his contemplated task of becoming a light heavyweight.

For McTigue it will be just another chance to make some money.

It is their second meeting. They fought a twelve-round no-decision contest in 1925. Opinion was divided over the outcome of this bout.

The battle promises to be a contest of good right hands.

Both fighters are hard right hand hitters and McTigue probably will rely on this hand to win, for it is conceded that the younger Mickey can outbox the veteran.

Walker is obsessed with the idea that he can whip any of the lightweights and if he wins tonight intends immediately issuing challenges to Jimmy Slattery and Tommy Loughran, claimants of the title.

Walker expects to weigh 165 and McTigue 175.

On the Rialto, McTigue is a 6-5 favorite. The bout seems to be a case of a good little man against a good, though aged big man.

Importance of Taste

We imperatively require a perception, and a homage to beauty in our companions. Other virtues are in request in the field and workyard, but a certain degree of taste is not to be spared in those we sit with. I could better eat with one who did not respect the truth or the laws than with a sloven and unrepresentable person. Moral qualities rule the world, but at short distances the senses are despot.

OPEN SEASON FOR MANAGERS

It's getting so nowadays that every time a ball player finishes the season with his batting average above .300 he takes off his shoes, puts his feet on the mantle and spends the long, frosty evenings dreaming of the day when he will fall into a soft managerial berth and come up covered with laurel and other crinkly green goods.

At least that's how the ball player imagines the metamorphosis. Three are several sadder, wiser men who wear a hunted look these days and who could tell him differently, for the open season for baseball managers is on.

Five major league clubs will have new pilots in 1928, making a total of 13 managerial changes in two seasons.

Of the eight new managers who started the 1927 season, five survived the unkindest cut of autumn.

In the American League, the newcomers met with signal and uniform lack of success. In the National League, with one exception, quite the reverse was the case.

Two of the three new National League pilots were Donie Bush and Bob O'Farrell, and it will be recalled that at the finish these two were fighting for the flag right down into the penultimate game of the season.

Stuffy McInnis, the third tyro of the trio, fell flat into the basement with a load of Philadelphia ivory on top of him.

The National League, therefore, scored an average of .667 in "Be Kind to New Managers" year. Whereas the American League's average was .000. At the start of the season, there were five new managers on the job in the junior circuit. At the close, their clubs were roosting on the five lowest rungs of the American League ladder.

Miller Huggins, Connie Mack and Bucky Harris were the only managers retained by American League clubs after the scandals and shakeups of last winter—and their clubs ran one-two-three!

Cleveland and Chicago, of the American League clubs which tried new managers this year, are ready to try again.

Jack McAllister and Ray Schalk are wearing that restless, furtive air indigenous to the turkey tribe at this time of year.

The National League is due for three managerial changes.

The Phillies have nothing against Stuffy McInnis, but certainly Stuffy has good grounds for a damage suit or something, against the Phils. So there'll be a new manager there; may be a new owner, too.

Dave Bancroft lost all control of the Boston Braves during the club's last western swing of the 1927 season, and so he lost his scalp as well.

Such is the immutable law of the tribe.

Judge Emil Fuchs, who was very fond of Banny, sold him down the river to Brooklyn.

The fifth new manager of the year will be Rogers Hornsby, who is slated to succeed John J. McGraw as active boss of the New York Giants.

Naturally, this is no reflection upon McGraw's managerial ability. It is rather a reflection on his shape.

Walter Johnson should have no difficulty in making a success of managing a ball club.

As we stood talking about his baseball dreams the other day, down by the kennels in the rear of Walter's pleasant Maryland home, I could not help thinking:

"Why, most ball players I know would throw their arms off for this fellow."

Johnson's unassuming magnetism should draw about him baseball loyalties that could be welded into a pennant-making machine in almost any man's league.

Come on in ... the smoking's fine!

ARE you on the outside looking in? Come on in. Bring your pipe. Load it with cool, long-burning Prince Albert, and you're a member, with full privileges, right off the bat.

Of course, we're happy. Just open a tidy red tin of P. A. and you'll begin to understand what makes us that way. What a fragrance! And that's only a starter. Tuck a load into the bowl of your old jimmy-pipe and connect with a match. Oh, Man—that taste!

Cool as reveille on a frosty morning. Sweet as a three-day leave. Mild as a brand-new rookie—mild and mellow, yet with that full, rich tobacco-body that puts the joy-o'-living into every single puff. You know what I mean, and I mean Prince Albert's got it! Try P. A.

The first puff will tell you why P. A. is known as the National Joy Smoke. It will tell you why this one brand is the world's largest seller. And every other puff is just as good. Get started, Man!

Chicago, Nov. 1.—Well rounded football teams without outstanding stars turn in more victories than eleven built about star players, it was evident today as the 1927 season entered its last weeks.

SENIORS HAVE BIG TIME AT PARTY

MANY DON FANTASTIC COSTUMES FOR THE EVENT

HAVE TREASURE HUNT; EACH ONE HAS BALLOON FOR FAVOR

On Saturday, the twenty-ninth of October, the Seniors had their second party of the year, a Halloween party. Quite a number of the students dressed up—in old fashioned gowns, clown suits, and gypsy costumes. "Flying Dutchman," "Three Deep," "Streets and Alleys" and "New Orleans" were played, besides some games with volley balls. The "trapeze" up in the gym was lowered and some of the students exhibited their athletic ability on this. A treasure hunt was staged, with all the lights turned out, and only a flashlight to aid them in finding the signs and arrows along the way. This hunt led them through the whole school and finally it landed them in the sewing room, where a bag of candy was found.

A delicious lunch was served in the beautifully decorated sewing room. Sandwiches, cocoa and chocolate ice cream-filled cream puffs were served. Everyone had a Halloween piece card, and a merry scramble took place while everyone tried to find his seat at the table. As favors all had balloons. After everyone had finished eating, someone conceived the idea of blowing up a balloon, tying it with a small piece of the decorations, and sending it to wend its way around the room. After a few minutes of batting the balloons back and forth, the party broke up and everyone started to go home. Meanwhile, some of the boys who had gone to see the Minnesota-Wisconsin game came back and told us that Minnesota had won. Of course this saddened everyone.

Everyone seemed to enjoy the party a great deal, as each one had contributed his part toward making it a success. We decided that the Seniors compose a very peppy class, even though they did not start out so "peppily."

Main Assembly.

My most carulated and respected longitudinally prosciocated vermillion edentate:

In compliance with a certain desire to converse with you in the script I hereby take up my pen in this Assembly and verse to you, though it be a clandestine conveyance of thought and incompatible with the by-laws of this organization. By accephalous acquiescence this morn I did exculpate my desire and promise a certain friend, Malcolm Ellison, that I would, against punition and advance, attend his domicile tonight and harken unto the pugnacious event staged by Tunney and Dempsey. Altho by commensurate willpower I could turn advectional and parsimonious by staging a veritable retreat from the shelters of the aforementioned domicile and thereby proceed to your hangar. However, this would be pernicious and nefarious in the highest degree, causing many vicissitudes not easily altered by mere adulation. So, considering that which is to be considered I sincerely hope that you may not rise to obstreperous insubility and wish a torrential precipitate to incapacitate me as but a myrmecophilous, but to subvert all commodes and put down superciliousness and your mind to facts as a mental valedudinarian. So, planning on your exoneration of improbabilities I will hereby terminate this missile.

Harrison P. T. A. Give Eiden's Scout Banquet

Wednesday, October 26, The Parent Teachers' Association of the Harrison school, entertained at a banquet for the benefit of the Boy Scouts of Troop 4. Mr. Eiden, teacher of history in the high school is Scoutmaster.

After a delightful banquet served by the Campfire girls under the supervision of Mrs. Cass, several speakers entertained the crowd. The speakers were: Mr. Cobb, Perry Newton, Mr. Eiden, Mr. Wieland, and Mr. Adair. Mr. Holvick read some of his letters from his humorous correspondent in Norway.

THE EDITOR SPEAKS—

Hallowe'en, I think, originally was the night on which evil spirits ran wild and did their dirty work. And it seems for lack of real spirits the youngsters took it upon themselves to have Hallowe'en coincide with their night out. Net morning the old folks wandered out to see what curious things had happened during the night. And things had happened—their hearts were warmed.

Which proves that the younger generation has always risen to the occasion.

The staff is selected. Just cast your eye up to the title line and see who is who. And all you people who have your names above look down here.

What you write sets the standard of the paper so make it good.

And all you people who tried and lost don't give up hope, we have no unchangeable selection, but keep on writing; we would like copy from without the staff circle very much.

And look at this—

Thursday morning we came ambling into Brainerd meeting as usual and Muff coming in started to get down to business. After he had all the pieces for this issue, he said that he had an announcement to make. It was that he had picked the staff. Well that quieted us down some. When he began to read the names of the lucky boys and girls we were as quiet as mice, but when he was through there was many a downcast face, but I for one am sure that Muff picked the ones who were best fitted for the positions. So I hope that they turn out a good party for the rest of the year, and that the annual is the biggest and best of all.

Suppose you stopped writing what do you think I would do for a column. Now I ask you?

SEMPER PARATUS CLUB ORGANIZES

THE CLUB WILL BE IN TWO DIVISIONS THIS YEAR

S. P. C. SPONSORS PUBLIC SPEAKING AND STAGING OF PLAYS

The Semper Paratus Club which was so successful last year is being reorganized under the supervision of Miss Taylor, Miss Olson and Miss Marshall, English teachers.

The club will be divided into two parts. In one, the Freshmen will work with the Juniors, and in the other, the Sophomores will be with the Seniors.

These divisions will act correspondingly in reference to club activities but will hold their meetings separately.

The members of the club are going to partake actively in all forms of public speaking and in the staging of plays.

They are also planning to compete in the Minnesota high school Declamation Contest which will be held sometime in February.

There will be oratory for boys, dramatists for girls and humorous readings for both.

In view of this extensive field it is hoped that a large number of students who show interest in these forms of speaking may see fit to join the club, and we are very sure that it will be one of the biggest years any organization in this school has yet experienced.

Assembly Is Outfitted With Theoretic Silencer

The Assembly Bell.

"Bz! Bz! Bz! Did she say that? Oh, I don't believe a word of it!" Boy, what a noise! Will it never be quiet in the big assembly so the students can study?

Bang! A lull comes in the storm of noise. What was that? Was it an amateur bomb? That noise was just the noise of an apparatus which Mr. Rosel put up. By the way, we hope it will make a noise loud enough to be heard above the talking.

"Bz! Bz! The talk is resumed, for the inmates of the assembly have a new topic on which to talk, the assembly bell.

BRAINERD DEFEATS AITKIN'S TEAM, 6-0

BOTH TEAMS SHOW UP NICELY ON THE FIELD LAST SATURDAY

Finkelstein & Ruben and Clyde Parker donated $16 for materials for the B. H. S. football team. We are glad to know that others than the students are so interested in our team and its undertakings.

Local football fans again witnessed Brainerd triumph over Aitkin, this time on the former's field. This game was just as exciting as the former one played last week with this opponent. The possibility of a no-score game, with each team fighting to score, kept the spectators in suspense to the last. It was only when, with three minutes to play, Wise caught a pass over the fatal white line that the local rooters felt that victory was theirs. Both teams fought stubbornly through the entire game, Aitkin striving to avenge the former defeat and Brainerd to again prove its superiority over the Aitkin aggregation. Quite a crowd assembled to see this game and showed a very responsive spirit at the exciting periods of the game.

This was the last home game of the season and was the last chance our supporters will have to see the local boys in action, unless they go with them to one of the two remaining outside games.

Looking over the team for the last few games, we noticed very favorable results of the strenuous practice. Hautala shows up very creditably in his passing, and deserves credit for his cool-headedness in looking over the field for an open man, in the face of the in-rushing opponent. Wise does very well in receiving passes and broken field running. He showed up very well in last Friday's game. Swanson is also good at the holding of passes, and is very effective at blocking. Fuller's style of running, fast or slow and hesitating, makes him a valuable man to carry the ball. Ellison's passing is very good for a man playing center for his first year. On the offense he is very alert, and is a deadly tackler on end runs. Hanson and Creger are the stalwarts of the line both on offense and defense. Greener is a steady player both on offense and defense, and is valuable because of his speed in coming out of the line for interference. LaCourse at tackle is improving with each game. Had it not been for his sprained wrist he would have given the opponents plenty of opposition. Guin is learning at the end position, and should be a valuable man next year. Barnes, although not as aggressive on defense, is a good forward pass receiver. Welliver, a very aggressive defense man, is now ready again after a leg injury, and should again give our opponents plenty to worry about. Buscher, after two weeks' rest from an injury, is again ready to direct the team from the calling position. A team is sometimes only as strong as its substitutes. In this sense Brainerd is especially strong for Goedderz, Viken, Fox, Abrahamson and Arthur Hautala make very capable men to send in when conditions make it necessary.

CLASS MEETING REVEALS OBSTACLES

SENIORS HAVE YET TO DECIDE ON MOTTO, COLORS, FLOWER

Last Thursday, the Seniors held another very important meeting for the purpose of selecting a suitable inspiring motto that would aid them in the years to come. Of those submitted to the class the most appropriate seemed to be "Not for school, but for life." Preceding the question of mottos it was decided that the best way of suiting the majority of the class in all discussions would be to require a two-thirds vote on all motions made. It is more difficult, but more fair.

The motto just named did not receive the sufficient two-thirds vote so was not accepted. It was then decided that the Class Motto Committee should select some more to be presented at the next meeting.

The next question taken up was that of the Class Flower, and color. The class was informed that the flower, chosen by party "caucus," could not be had at the time of graduation and the banquet, hence this committee was also appointed to choose other flowers, and corresponding colors.

The mount that had been chosen at a previous meeting for the class picture was sent around at the meeting and a plainer one shown to the students. A petition signed by a sufficient number of the class caused this. As the stamp of the ring will be embossed on the mounts, the first mount, it was thought, would be too elaborate. The plainer, more lasting finish, was chosen then.

A few questions about the Halloween Party which was given on Saturday night were brought up, and then the meeting adjourned, to be held again when the committees would be prepared to submit more mottos, colors and flowers.

Come on Seniors! Choose the best!

Who, What and Where

The students that took in the Minnesota-Wisconsin game on Saturday from Brainerd high were Milford Downie, John Ellison, Joe Greener, Herman Busher, Henry Hanson, Ernest Fox, Lester Creger, Wind Barnes, Walter Hautala, Ralph Anderson, Jimmie Tinkelpaugh, Sylvia Ericson, Bob Anderson, James Richards, Jacob Perlman, Leroy Wyett.

A number of the teachers also went down for the game. They were: Coach Kasch, Mr. Gridley, Mr. Eiden, the Misses Bowers, Schov, Gipson and Rinertson.

A new bell was installed last week under the Main Assembly desk by Mr. Rosel.

The students who went to the Older Boys' Conference through the courtesy of St. Paul's Episcopal church gave a report during the church service Sunday morning.

JUNIORS HAVE LOTS OF FUN

STUDENTS HAVE THEIR FORTUNES TOLD, SEE GHOSTS

Ow! Crash! Bang!

My goodness, what was that noise? A Junior, most likely, going through the den of "Horrors." If you ask what was in the "Den of Horrors" I may as well tell you. First of all, everyone was accompanied by the last flight of stairs by a ghost, that uttered dreadful noises. When you reached the last step you stepped down into space. When you did reach solid floor you were in among pails, tin cans and likewise. By and by you were introduced to a corpse.

How thrilling it all was! The most fun, however, was watching the members of the faculty go through this agony. We were rather disappointed, though, because I don't think they were as scared as they might have been.

After everyone was in the gym, there were games played. The first three or four were running games, the next dodge ball, and last of all was a game in which the ball was to have been kept in a circle (but of course it wasn't).

After we had worn ourselves out with games, we went down to the sewing room and had refreshments. There was a rush and a roar for everyone was hurrying around each of the tables to find his respective seat. After everyone was seated, each person received a fortune. Some of them were very satisfactory, at least, others objected to their fortunes.

Shortly after everyone had devoured his portion of the eats, there was a treasure hunt. There was an instruction sheet on the door of Mr. Johnson's room telling where to go to look for the treasure. We rushed in and out of nearly every room in the building until the chase finally ended when the treasure was found in the gym.

We all gathered around to get a glimpse of the long lost. The kitty didn't seem to be frightened at seeing so many faces. The kitty was black and from inward appearances, I believe it had filled itself up with candy.

Then came the time to depart. Well, we departed (I guess.) Everyone moved toward the door with a rather slow movement, for we hated to leave. But we are out for more good times this year.

The Storm

It was an afternoon in July. The heavy, sultry air and the thick, low-hanging cloud banks rising steadily from the horizon indicated a coming storm of no little consequence.

As the clouds rose higher, short fitful gusts of wind would arise and wear themselves out among the trees. The trees, in accordance with their will would bend themselves low and writhe to and fro in complete submission to the superior elements. Then, instead of these impish gusts of wind a more solemn aspect prevailed. A low moaning began, very quiet at first but slowly and steadily increasing until it became a veritable tempest. But was this the storm? The lightning? The thunder? The rain? Where were they? No, this was not the storm, so reverend, so resplendent in its fury but merely the forerunner of what was to follow! Of a sudden the tempest abated. Came in its stead a perfect calm. Not a single pine-needle murmured of the furious cyclone coming on. All the birds and forest children hid themselves as best they might, till the storm did waste its fury, all its vastness, and conquering might.

In a moment and without warning a flash of lightning cut the sky. Then a crash, then a deluge, came the Storm King riding high. For twenty short minutes he lashed his horses, riveted the sky with fire and flame. Then as suddenly as he appeared in the conflict, just so he vanished again. Down below on the bedridden forests, pattered and swished the cleansing rain, all that was left of this great factor—the Storm King—inflictor of pain. And even this small remnant of that gone before, soon disappeared in a fading spray, soon enough so that from behind lifting clouds, shone the sun intermingled with glorified shrouds heralding the close of day.

In the Middle Ages it used to be a breakfast hall.

In the Mid Victorian period it was a breakfast room.

In 1927 it's a breakfast nook.

In 2000 it will be a breakfast shelf and in 2500, people won't eat breakfast.

EXCHANGE

The Seniors of the Little Falls HI School have already chosen as their class play—"Nothing but the Truth"—a B-art Comedy by James Montgomery. We wish you success Seniors!

Assembly Period Fables

In the assembly there is always something going on and something to do.

If there are no studies to get, there are always pupils you can talk to. The teachers don't mind.

Another thing to help pass away the time is to throw chalk at the instructors. They always laugh and throw it back playfully.

Many times you see pupils studying in an assembly; now, this is all foolishness for a person to study in the assembly. That is one period in which you are to write notes, sleep, talk, throw chalk, and shoot paper wads at the teachers. They laugh it off.

Another good trick is to leave the room without permission, which the teachers allow, and go back to the library. With the instructor's help you can manage to trip everyone who enters the library door.—The Needle, Atlantic, Iowa.

Home Training Classes

Give a Mother's Tea

Tuesday, the seventh period, there was a bustling in the Sewing and Cooking rooms that hinted excitement. The Home Training girls were seen busily walking to and fro with interesting looking pans and trays.

At three-thirty mothers began to arrive and then the news spread rapidly. The Home Training girls, under the supervision of Miss Seren, the girls in both classes had invited son, were giving a Mother's Tea and their mothers. However, the seventh period class did the entertaining.

The mothers were then shown into the sewing room which was decorated for Hallowe'en. Orange candles with orange and black shades adorned the tables, and the serving table was decorated with witches, cats, and a bowl of Chrysanthemums.

The hostesses, Ethel Burns and Ellen Erickson, presided at the table and poured the coffee. The assistant hostesses, Dorothy Hass, Phoebe Jack, Irene Englund, Lillian Fox, and Frances Fisher, served cookies, cheese wafers, and sandwiches.

All the mothers reported that the cooks were good cooks—however, the class felt that the credit all goes to Miss Seren.

FRESHMEN ELECT THEIR OFFICERS

MISS GIPSON AND MISS SUNDBERG ARE ADVISORS

GERALD CASS IS PRESIDENT AND LOUISE CLAUSEN VICE-PRESIDENT

The Freshmen held their first meeting last Tuesday in Miss O'Brien's room. Mr. Johnson acted as chairman. Gerald Cass was elected to lead the class through their first year of high school life. Louise Clausen is vice-president, Helen Sheets secretary, and Raymond Hildebrand treasurer. Miss Gipson and Miss Sundberg are the faculty advisers. The meetings are to be held once a month on Tuesday, and the dues are 15c a month. Further business was postponed until the next meeting.

CHANG TELLS HI-Y OF CHINESE EDUCATION

The Hi-Y held their weekly meeting Oct. 26 at the Y. M. C. A. after which Chaucer Chang spoke. At 6 o'clock they had a supper after which they had their business meeting.

Then Chaucer Chang gave fine talk on "Colleges in the Orient." The reason there are so many Chinese students in this country is this: In 1900 the Chinese people decided to rid the country of all foreigners, which caused the Boxer rebellion. After the rebellion China had to give the United States two hundred millions. The United States gave the money back, because they thought they did not deserve it, on condition the Chinese should come here to learn the Western ways.

He also told us that the Chinese are not interested in any kind of sports, being very studious and almost always at their books.

The golfer missed the ball three times, plowing up the turf. "You've revoked," said his partner. "But I'm not playing cards," remarked the unfortunate player. "All the same," was the reply "you've been playing a spade instead of a club!"—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Why, the makers of erasers, of course.

Frank: A dog's tail.

Miss Laipple: What trees have adventitious roots?

J. Bunion trees (banyan trees).

Edison surely is clever. First he invented the electric light and then invented the phonograph so people would stay up all night and burn electricity while listening to it.

Allen J. (in Latin, meaning ablative absolute): A group of words in the ablative case together with a participle is an ablative positive.

Miss Laipple (studying mental deficiencies): What did they do with mental deficient in the World War?

Roger Callan: They put them in the front line.

"Some say it's only the old birds who go in for face lifting." Here's one only eighteen years old who's had her lifted hundreds of times, and with no ill effect."

The oyster yawned quite widely And in speedy tones he said: "When 'stars' come out it's time for me To seek my oyster bed!"

NUMBER 7

SENIORS HAVE BIG TIME AT PARTY

MANY DON FANTASTIC COSTUMES FOR THE EVENT

HAVE TREASURE HUNT: EACH ONE HAS BALLOON FOR FAVOR

On Saturday, the twenty-ninth of October, the Seniors had their second party of the year, a Halloween party. Quite a number of the students dressed up in old fashioned gowns, clown suits and gypsy costumes. "Flying Dutchman," "Three Deep," "Streets and Alleys" and "New Orleans" were played, besides some games with volley balls. The "trapeze" up in the gym was lowered and some of the students exhibited their athletic ability on this. A treasure hunt was staged, with all the lights turned out, and only a flashlight to aid them in finding the signs and arrows along the way. This hunt led them through the whole school and finally it landed them in the sewing room, where a bag of candy was found.

A delicious lunch was served in the beautifully decorated sewing room. Sandwiches, cocoa and chocolate ice cream-filled cream puffs were served. Everyone had a Halloween piece card, and a merry scramble took place while everyone tried to find his seat at the table. As favors, all had balloons. After everyone had finished eating, someone conceived the idea of blowing up a balloon, tying it with a small piece of the decorations, and sending it to wend its weary way around the room. After a few minutes of batting the balloons back and forth, the party broke up and everyone started to go home. Meanwhile, some of the boys who had gone to see the Minnesota-Wisconsin game came back and told us that Minnesota had won. Of course this saddened everyone.

Everyone seemed to enjoy the party a great deal, as each one had contributed his part toward making it a success. We decided that the Seniors compose a very peppy class, even though they did not start out so "peppily."

Boy Says He Was Insulted In a Foreign Language

Sept. 22, 1927
Brainerd, Minn.
Main Assembly.

My most carrulated and respected longitudinally probosciated vermilingual edentate:

In compliance with a certain desire to converse with you in the script I hereby take up my pen in this Assembly and verse to you, though it be a clandestine conveyance of thought and incompatible with the by-laws of this organization. By accephalous acquiescence this morn I did exculpate my desire and promise a certain friend, Malcolm Ellison, that I would, against punishment and advance, attend his domicile tonight and harken unto the pugnacious event staged by Tunney and Dempsey. Altho by commensurate willpower I could turn adventitious and parsimonious by staging a veritable retreat from the shelters of the aforementioned domicile and thereby proceed to your hangar. However, this would be pernicious and nefarious in the highest degree, causing many vicissitudes not easily altered by mere adulation. So, considering that which is to be considered I sincerely hope that you may not rise to obstreperous irascibility and wish a torrential precipitate to incapacitate me as but a myrmecophagous, but to subitize all commodities and put down superciliousness and superaneation and not close your mind to facts as a mental valedudinarian. So, planning on your exoneratation of improbabilities I will hereby terminate this missive.

Your Peduncular confluent friend,
CARL ZAPFFE, JR.

Harrison P. T. A. Give Eiden's Scout Banquet

Wednesday, October 26, The Parent Teachers' Association of the Harrison school, entertained at a banquet for the benefit of the Boy Scouts of Troop 4. Mr. Eiden, teacher of history in the high school is Scoutmaster.

After a delightful banquet served by the Campfire girls under the supervision of Mrs. Cass, several speakers entertained the crowd. The speakers were: Mr. Cobb, Perry Newton, Mr. Eiden, Mr. Wieland, and Mr. Adair. Mr. Holvick read some of his letters from his humorous correspondent in Norway.

THE EDITOR SPEAKS—

Hallowe'en, I think, originally was the night on which evil spirits ran wild and did their dirty work. And it seems for lack of real spirits the youngsters took it upon themselves to have Hallowe'en coincide with their night out. Not morning the old folks wandered out to see what curious things had happened during the night. And things had happened—their hearts were warmed.

Which proves that the younger generation has always risen to the occasion.

The staff is selected. Just cast your eye up to the title line and see who is who. And all you people who have your names above look down here.

What you write sets the standard of the paper so make it good. And all you people who tried and lost don't give up hope, we have no unchangeable selection, but keep on writing; we would like copy from without the staff circle very much.

And look at this—
Thursday morning we came ambling into Brainerd meeting as usual and Muff coming in started to get down to business. After he had all the pieces for this issue, he said that he had an announcement to make. It was that he had picked the staff. Well that quieted us down some. When he began to read the names of the lucky boys and girls we were as quiet as mice, but when he was through there was many a downcast face, but I for one am sure that Muff picked the ones who were best fitted for the positions. So I hope that they turn out a good paper for the rest of the year, and that the annual is the biggest and best of all.

Suppose you stopped writing what do you think I would do for a column. Now I ask you?

Contributions in this issue by: Carl Zapffe, Jr., Ferdinand Fredrickson, Phoebe Jack, Stewart Patterson.

SEMPER PARATUS CLUB ORGANIZES

THE CLUB WILL BE IN TWO DIVISIONS THIS YEAR

S. P. C. SPONSORS PUBLIC SPEAKING AND STAGING OF PLAYS

The Semper Paratus Club which was so successful last year is being reorganized under the supervision of Miss Taylor, Miss Olson and Miss Marshall, English teachers.

The club will be divided into two parts. In one, the Freshmen will work with the Juniors, and in the other, the Sophomores will be with the Seniors.

These divisions will act correspondingly in reference to club activities but will hold their meetings separately.

The members of the club are going to partake actively in all forms of public speaking and in the staging of plays.

They are also planning to compete in the Minnesota high school Declamation Contest which will be held sometime in February.

There will be oratory for boys, dramatics for girls and humorous readings for both.

In view of this extensive field it is hoped that a large number of students who show interest in these forms of speaking may see fit to join the club, and we are very sure that it will be one of the biggest years any organization in this school has yet experienced.

Assembly Is Outfitted With Theoretic Silencer

The Assembly Bell.
"Bz! Bz! Bz! Did she say that? Oh, I don't believe a word of it!" Boy, what a noise! Will it never be quiet in the big assembly so the students can study?

Bang! A lull comes in the storm of noise. What was that? Was it an amateur bomb? That noise was just the noise of an apparatus which Mr. Rosel put up. By the way, we hope it will make a noise loud enough to be heard above the talking.

"Bz! Bz! The talk is resumed, for the inmates of the assembly have a new topic on which to talk, the assembly bell.

BRAINERD DEFEATS AITKIN'S TEAM, 6-0

BOTH TEAMS SHOW UP NICELY ON THE FIELD LAST SATURDAY

Finkelstein & Ruben and Clyde Parker donated $16 for materials for the B. H. S. football team. We are glad to know that others than the students are so interested in our team and its undertakings.

Local football fans again witnessed Brainerd triumph over Aitkin, this time on the former's field. This game was just as exciting as the former one played last week with this opponent. The possibility of a no-score game, with each team fighting to score, kept the spectators in suspense to the last. It was only when, with three minutes to play, Wise caught a pass over the fatal white line that the local rooters felt that victory was theirs. Both teams fought stubbornly through the entire game, Aitkin striving to avenge the former defeat and Brainerd to again prove its superiority over the Aitkin aggregation. Quite a crowd assembled to see this game and showed a very responsive spirit at the exciting periods of the game.

This was the last home game of the season and was the last chance our supporters will have to see the local boys in action, unless they go with them to one of the two remaining outside games.

Looking over the team for the last few games, we noticed very favorable results of the strenuous practice. Hautala shows up very creditably in his passing, and deserves credit for his cool-headedness in looking over the field for an open man, in the face of the in-rushing opponent. Wise does very well in receiving passes and broken field running. He showed up very well in last Friday's game. Swanson is also good at the holding of passes, and is very effective at blocking. Fuller's style of running, fast or slow and hesitating, makes him a valuable man to carry the ball. Ellison's passing is very good for a man playing center for his first year. On the offense he is very alert, and is a deadly tackler on end runs. Hanson and Creger are the stalwarts of the line both on offense and defense. Greener is a steady player both on offense and defense, and is valuable because of his speed in coming out of the line for interference. LaCourse at tackle is improving with each game. Had it not been for his sprained wrist he would have given the opponents plenty of opposition. Guin is learning at the end position, and should be a valuable man next year. Barnes, although not as aggressive on defense, is a good forward pass receiver. Welliver, a very aggressive defense man, is now ready again after a leg injury, and should again give our opponents plenty to worry about. Buscher, after two weeks' rest from an injury, is again ready to direct the team from the calling position. A team is sometimes only as strong as its substitutes. In this sense Brainerd is especially strong for Goederz, Viken, Fox, Abrahamson and Arthur Hautala make very capable men to send in when conditions make it necessary.

Next week Brainerd plays Milaca there, Saturday, 2:30.

Sophs Decide to Lower Ante at Last Meeting

The Sophs held their second meeting of the year, Thursday at 3:30 in Mr. Johnson's room. The dues were changed from fifteen cents to ten cents a month and it was also decided, that all Sophs wishing to take part in the class activities are to pay a fee of five cents to have their names placed on the roll. No definite date was set for the party, but it will probably take place at the end of this month. After the appointment of various committees the meeting was adjourned until Thursday.

A dying reporter had called another of the same trade to his death bed. Feebly he whispered, "Charlie, I think I'm done for." The other cried in horror, "Jim, for heaven's sake, don't end your last sentence with a preposition."

A number of the teachers also went down for the game. They were: Coach Kasch, Mr. Gridley, Mr. Eiden, the Misses Bowers, Schow, Gipson and Rinertson.

CLASS MEETING REVEALS OBSTACLES

SENIORS HAVE YET TO DECIDE ON MOTTO, COLORS, FLOWER

Last Thursday, the Seniors held another very important meeting for the purpose of selecting a suitable inspiring motto that would aid them in the years to come. Of those submitted to the class the most appropriate seemed to be "Not for school, but for life." Preceding the question of mottos it was decided that the best way of suiting the majority of the class in all discussions would be to require a two-thirds vote on all motions made. It is more difficult, but more fair.

The motto just named did not receive the sufficient two-thirds vote so was not accepted. It was then decided that the Class Motto Committee should select some more to be presented at the next meeting.

The next question taken up was that of the Class Flower, and color. The class was informed that the flower, chosen by party "caucus," could not be had at the time of graduation and the banquet, hence this committee was also appointed to choose other flowers, and corresponding colors.

The mount that had been chosen at a previous meeting for the class picture was sent around at the meeting and a plainer one shown to the students. A petition signed by a sufficient number of the class caused this. As the stamp of the ring will be embossed on the mounts, the first mount, it was thought, would be too elaborate. The plainer, more lasting finish, was chosen then.

A few questions about the Hallowe'en Party which was given on Saturday night were brought up, and then the meeting adjourned, to be held again when the committees would be prepared to submit more mottos, colors and flowers.

Come on Seniors! Choose the best!

Assembly Period Fables

In the assembly there is always something going on and something to do.

If there are no studies to get, there are always pupils you can talk to. The teachers don't mind.

Another thing to help pass away the time is to throw chalk at the instructors. They always laugh and throw it back playfully.

Many times you see pupils studying in an assembly; now, this is all foolishness for a person to study in the assembly. That is one period in which you are to write notes, sleep, talk, throw chalk, and shoot paper wads at the teachers. They laugh it off.

Another good trick is to leave the room without permission, which the teachers allow, and go back to the library. With the instructor's help you can manage to trip everyone who enters the library door.—The Needle, Atlantic, Iowa.

Home Training Classes

Give a Mother's Tea

Tuesday, the seventh period, there was a bustling in the Sewing and Cooking rooms that hinted excitement. The Home Training girls were seen busily walking to and fro with interesting looking pans and trays.

At three-thirty mothers began to arrive and then the news spread rapidly. The Home Training girls, under the supervision of Miss Seren, the girls in both classes had invited son, were giving a Mother's Tea and their mothers. However, the seventh period class did the entertaining.

The mothers were then shown into the sewing room which was decorated for Hallowe'en. Orange candles with orange and black shades adorned the tables, and the serving table was decorated with witches, cats, and a bowl of Chrysanthemums.

The hostesses, Ethel Burns and Ellen Erickson, presided at the table and poured the coffee. The assistant hostesses, Dorothy Hass, Phoebe Jack, Irene Englund, Lillian Fox, and Frances Fisher, served cookies, cheese wafers, and sandwiches.

All the mothers reported that the cooks were good cooks—however, the class feel that the credit all goes to Miss Seren.

CHANG TELLS HI-Y OF CHINESE EDUCATION

The Hi-Y held their weekly meeting Oct. 26 at the Y. M. C. A. after which Chaucer Chang spoke. At 6 o'clock they had a supper after which they had their business meeting.

Then Chaucer Chang gave fine talk on "Colleges in the Orient." The reason there are so many Chinese students in this country is this: In 1900 the Chinese people decided to rid the country of all foreigners, which caused the Boxer rebellion. After the rebellion China had to give the United States two hundred millions. The United States gave the money back, because they thought they did not deserve it, on condition the Chinese should come here to learn the Western ways.

He also told us that the Chinese are not interested in any kind of sports, being very studious and almost always at their books.

PLEADS GUILTY TO THEFT OF PAPERS

Jerry Joseph Quirk, 29, Accountant Sentenced to St. Cloud Reformatory

SENTENCE SUSPENDED

Attorney for Defendant States He Was Misguided and Misled by Employer

Jerry Joseph Quirk, 29, accountant, pleaded guilty in district court Saturday afternoon to burglary in the third degree in connection with the theft of certain documents from the Manganiferous Iron Company, Crosby. Quirk was sentenced by Judge W. S. McClenahan to a term in St. Cloud reformatory not to exceed five years and the sentence suspended.

A. J. Sullivan appeared for the state while O. A. Blanchard represented the defendant.

Quirk stated he had been working for Butler Brothers, contractors, St. Paul for five years but had worked for the Butlers at Crosby for nine months.

In his plea for leniency for the defendant Attorney Blanchard stated according to court record that he was satisfied that Quirk was not a criminal but had been misguided and misled by his employer, Walter Butler and the reason the defendant was endeavoring to get this information for his employer was because his employer had some sinister motive of his own that he desired to satisfy pertaining to a so-called family disruption.

"There was friction in the family and it appears that his employer, Walter Butler, was endeavoring to get information regarding some of the business transactions of the other side of the family, and he made it clear to this young man that if he did not obtain the information that of course this man would have no position, and being misled and misguided, and without any proffer having been made in the way of pecuniary benefit to the defendant by his employer, he did it merely to satisfy the wishes and requests of his employer. I think Francis Butler, who represents the uncle, who I believe was the complaining witness, wasn't he? (the witness was interrupted at this point by the remarks of Mr. Butler, "The Manganiferous Iron Company") is familiar with the circumstances, your Honor, and I believe he will verify my statement in that respect. I think he will also inform the court that he himself personally believes that the defendant in this particular case is not a criminal at heart, that he was misguided and misled by a shrewd and capable business man," said Mr. Blanchard.

Quirk told the following story to the court in connection with the case.

"I was working in Crosby for Mr. Butler, the Manganiferous Iron Company, and Easter came and I went down home, and when I was home I dropped in to see the boys of the St. Paul office, and Robert Butler, son of Walter Butler, met me coming into the building of the general office and approached me and started to talk to me about the affairs of the Butlers. During the conversation he told me that his dad was being mistreated by the rest of the Butlers, and that he thought if he could get hold of a statement of the Manganiferous Iron Company's affairs, and Stanley Mining Company's affairs, it would help his dad in his personal matters and he asked me if I was satisfied up north where I was working. I said 'No, I would rather be back in the St. Paul office.' He said he was looking for an accountant or bookkeeper and that the position would be open to me, that he would speak to his father for that situation. Then he said he wanted to send the statement to another brother who was out in California by the name of Cooley. I believe, that he wanted to show Cooley what his brother Emmett was doing in his business. I went up to Crosby and I mailed this statement and while I was there they called me to come down and explain the statement to Walter Butler, that he did not understand them. I went to St. Paul and explained the statements. I believe they paid my expenses on that trip. And then I went back to Crosby and they asked me for a few more items of information which I sent."

Quirk stated that later he left Crosby and went back to work in St. Paul. To secure information lacking, he said he went back to Crosby to get it and was arrested as he left the office.

The fire started in the home of Phillip Crowder at 1320 M. street. Residents were away at the time, section of the city the fire department was forced to fight the flames with chemicals. Seven tanks of chemicals were used to save the two houses adjoining. It was the first fire in Brainerd in October.

VISITS STAMPING GROUNDS

71 Year Old Printer Has Worked on Newspapers in 42 States

Frank W. Walden, 71 years old, veteran printer for over 60 years having started in the work at the age of nine years at River Falls, Wis., was on his way to "his old stamping grounds" at Duluth this morning on foot—and didn't mind in the least this chilly November morning with its first snow of the season.

Last night Mr. Walden stayed at Motley and beat his way to Brainerd via a freight train. He is at the present time making a jaunt over the old trails, visiting printers and in general seeing the country.

He carries a union traveling card as a printer and has worked in 42 states.

"I started to work as an apprentice printer at the age of nine years in River Falls, Wis.," he said. "At that time we set type by hand. Since that time I have worked on several hundred newspapers, from New Orleans, New York to Seattle. I have worked on three of the newspapers of the Twin Cities."

BRAINERD 25 YEARS AGO

From the Daily Dispatch

November 1, 1902

F. E. Stout returned from the north this morning from a trip over the M. & I.

Trainmaster Strachan of the M. & I. left this afternoon on No. 6 for St. Paul. He goes on to Chicago on business for a few days.

James George left this afternoon for Bemidji where he has accepted a position with Erwin and O'Brien in the logging business.

Mrs. Jane Stewart and Mrs. Wythe Nielson arrived in the city today from Moundsville, W. Va., and will visit a few days with Mrs. Jennie Grewcox. Mrs. Stewart is the mother and Mrs. Nielson the sister of Mrs. Grewcox and they are on their way to Valley City, N. D., from the east.

It is understood that the Minnesota Water Works Co. is negotiating with those interested in the dam north of the city and the city council for utilizing power to run the water works of the city and if the proper agreement can be drawn up it is more than likely that a large wheel and one which will accommodate other enterprises that are thinking of coming to Brainerd will be installed.

It is proposed to make arrangements to have the water power company put the wheel in the city, furnish the power through its electric light station by putting in another dynamo.

"IRISH HEARTS," with May McAvoy, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Sheila Kildare and her father emigrate to America to follow Emmett Murtough to whom she is betrothed. Murtough joins a bootlegging band and Sheila is befriended by the family of Rory O'Shea, a professional lightweight boxer. Murtough, influenced by a cabaret girl, betrays his band. He deserts Sheila at a dance and Rory thrashes him. The rival gang raids the hiding place on Long Island revealed by Murtough and carries away $150,000 of contraband.

Clarice had taken Murtough to a hospital, where the cuts in his face from Rory's fists were treated. Several stitches were taken in the wounds across his brow.

"Looks like you had been in a battle," said Schermer when he met them.

"There was a row at the dance last night," explained Clarice. She did not care so much for Murtough with the ludicrous bandages covering his face. "Of course you ought to see the other fellow," she laughed.

"Always," said Schermer. He guided them into the garage office. There he counted out five thousand dollars and handed it to Murtough. "You did a good job, Murtough," he said. "It was well worth every cent of this. Now I suppose you and your sweetie will get married and settle down, eh?"

"We're going west," said Clarice. "I don't think it would be healthy for Emmett as long as Clocker's around. He had a quarrel with him last night and I'll bet the new hat that Clocker suspects him the

"Here's a through ticket to Chicago and $250."

When he finds out about the raid.

"I wouldn't be surprised," admitted Schermer.

"But you said there wasn't a chance of a tip-off to him," protested Murtough.

"Well, you can never tell, some of our boys might leak. I don't say they would, but it certainly will be safer for you out of town than in."

"Then let's get started now," exclaimed Murtough. Schermer went out to a high powered car in which a driver was seated. "Drive my friends to Bridgeport," he ordered. He looked at his watch. "You should be reaching Ossining at a quarter to seven. Do you understand?"

"Sure," said the chauffeur, and shortly after the car backed out and turned north, carrying Clarice, Murtough and two suitcases.

"You certainly look bad," said Clarice. "I knew that Rory could fight, but I never thought he could lick a big man like you."

"I never boxed; he's been a boxer all his life. I could beat him any day in a rough and tumble fight. But I couldn't dodge his fists."

The car rolled on, the chauffeur watching his clock and adjusting his speed to the schedule Schermer had announced in the garage. Neither Clarice nor Murtough gave thought to their situation.

"But we got a great start haven't we, sweetheart?" said Murtough. "With this we can get into business for ourselves and make a lot of money."

"Sure we can, and I know just what to do and how to do it, Big Boy. You follow in the steps of your little Clarice and she'll make us both rich."

"Do you want to go to Detroit, and how far west is that?" Murtough asked.

"We'll see what's best. We'll lay low up here until I can get some information from my friends out there. Then we'll decide what to do."

Dusk had come when the machine approached Ossining, and the clock on the dashboard read twenty minutes to seven. There was a grinding of brakes and a stop so sudden that both Clarice and Murtough were thrown forward across the back of the driver's seat. A car stood across the roadway, preventing further passage.

"Climb out, you," a voice ordered, and two men stepped from behind the strange car. Both wore masks. Murtough, Clarice and the chauffeur dismounted. Swiftly the one who had given the command frisked Murtough and took the huge roll of bills. "Good enough," he murmured. He looked at his watch. "Come on, get in here," he ordered Murtough, pointing to the tonneau of his machine. Murtough climbed in and found himself sitting by a stranger, also masked, who shoved a gun into his side.

The leader turned to the man who remained in the road. "You guard the girl and the driver until I get back." He leaped into the seat beside Murtough.

"Now, you stick head," he said curtly, "here's a through ticket to Chicago and $250. That's enough for you. And take it from me you'd better start in carrying a hod. You haven't got brains enough to be a crook. This train stops here in five minutes. I'll take you to the steps of the car and unless you want to be carried in a box you'd better hop that train and stay there."

"Who are you?" demanded Murtough.

"Just a friend of yours," replied his captor as he slipped off the mask and faced Murtough.

"Schermer!"

"You certainly didn't think I was going to let you get away with that five grand, did you?" sneered Schermer. "Why, you poor boob, you never had a chance. And so you won't think you have a chance, let me tell you that I've already tipped off Clocker that it was you who gave us the information. I'm doing you a favor by sending you out of town."

"And listen, dumb-bell, you go straight when you get out there. Keep away from crooks, because you don't fit in."

At the station Schermer and Murtough stepped from the car just as the train came to a stop. Schermer took his arm as though he was a friend helping a sick man and led him to the train. As the conductor cried "All aboard!" he assisted Murtough up the steps of the car. Murtough passed within, bound for the west and a career, while he decided in those brief minutes, would be honest from then on.

As Schermer's car drove back to Clarice he again slipped the mask over his eyes. He climbed in beside the frightened girl.

"Where is he? What did you do to him?" she cried.

"Oh, he's safe enough."

"You didn't hurt him?"

"No."

Schermer took her hand. "You're kind of a nice kid, you are," he said. Leaning forward he told the chauffeur to return to New York. As the car swung about Schermer asked: "Don't you know me?"

"Not with the cheaters on" pertly answered Clarice.

"How about it now? Again the mask was removed.

"Gus!"

"That's me! You didn't think I'd let that cap get away with five grand, did you?"

"But what about me?"

"Oh, that's different. I'll take care of you, kid. How about a thousand now and some more when you need it?"

"Oh, Gus, you're the smartest guy I've ever met. You're the kind of a guy a girl could really love."

"Think you could, then let's," he smiled and he counted out ten one hundred dollar bills. "Put that in the bank, kid, but remember there'll be more when you want it. Now let's stop off some place and get a decent dinner."

"Okay with me. I need food," accepted Clarice as she snuggled down in the seat against Schermer and sighed with relief.

Old Tom Kildare was the only person who inquired about the absence of Murtough as the days passed and no word came from him. Rory had learned that Murtough had been working with the Clocker band, but he did not tell the truth to Sheila. Murtough had vanished. Why should he blacken the memory of the man more than his own actions had done thought Rory. But Old Tom persisted, and it was Devil Tom told him all about Murtough one evening at the Club.

"Murtough was driving for Clocker," Devil told him "and he put over a double cross which cost Clocker $150,000 in real stuff. Not only that, the double crossing dog let two of our men get killed on his account. If he ever shows his face in New York again Clocker will get him and get him good."

This Kildare related to Sheila several weeks after Murtough had disappeared. The old man held no brief for Murtough now. He was a boaster and a braggart and a ne'er-do-well. He had deceived even his best friend, Old Tom himself. Sheila was a lucky girl to be rid of him.

"IRISH HEARTS," with May McAvoy, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Sheila Kildare and her father emigrate to America to follow Emmett Murtough to whom she is betrothed. Murtough joins a bootlegging band and Sheila is befriended by the family of Rory O'Shea, a professional light-tight boxer. Murtough, influenced by a cabaret girl, betrays his band. He deserts Sheila at a dance and Rory thrashes him. The rival gang raids the hiding place on Long Island revealed by Murtough and carries away $150,000 of contraband.

Clarice had taken Murtough to a hospital, where the cuts in his face from Rory's fists were treated. Several stitches were taken in the wounds across his brow.

"Looks like you had been in a battle," said Schermer when he met them.

"There was a row at the dance last night," explained Clarice. She did not care so much for Murtough with the ludicrous bandages covering his face. "Of course you ought to see the other fellow," she laughed.

"Always," said Schermer. He guided them into the garage office. There he counted out five thousand dollars and handed it to Murtough. "You did a good job, Murtough," he said. "It was well worth every cent of this. Now I suppose you and your sweetie will get married and settle down, eh?"

"We're going west," said Clarice. "I don't think it would be healthy for Emmett as long as Cloccker's around. He had a quarrel with him last night and I'll bet he new hat that Cloccker suspects him the minute he finds out about the raid."

"I wouldn't be surprised," admitted Schermer.

"But you said there wasn't a chance of a tiff-off to him," protested Murtough.

"Well, you can never tell, some of our boys might leak. I don't say they would, but it certainly will be safer for you out of town than in."

"Then let's get started now," exclaimed Murtough. Schermer went out to a high powered car in which a driver was seated. "Drive my friends to Bridgeport," he ordered. He looked at his watch. "You should be reaching Ossining at a quarter to seven. Do you understand?"

"Sure," said the chauffeur, and shortly after the car backed out and turned north, carrying Clarice, Murtough and two suitcases.

"You certainly look bad," said Clarice. "I knew that Rory could fight, but I never thought he could look a big man like you."

"I never boxed; he's been a boxer all his life. I could beat him any day in a rough and tumble fight. But I couldn't dodge his fists."

"The car rolled on, the chauffeur watching his clock and adjusting his speed to the schedule Schermer had announced in the garage. Neither Clarice nor Murtough gave thought to time.

"But we got a great start haven't we, sweetheart?" said Murtough. "With this we can get into business for ourselves and make a lot of money."

"Sure we can, and I know just what to do and how to do it. Big Boy. You follow in the steps of your little Clarice and she'll make us both rich."

"Do you want to go to Detroit, and how far west is that?" Murtough asked.

"We'll see what's best. We'll lay low up here until I can get some information from my friends out there. Then we'll decide what to do."

Dusk had come when the machine approached Ossining, and the clock on the dashboard read twenty minutes to seven. There was a grinding of brakes and a stop so sudden that both Clarice and Murtough were thrown forward across the back of the driver's seat. A car stood across the roadway, preventing further passage.

"Climb out, you," a voice ordered, and two men stepped from behind the steering car. Both wore masks. Murtough, Clarice and the chauffeur dismounted. Swiftly the one who had given the command frisked Murtough and took the huge roll of bills. "Good enough," he murmured. He looked at his watch. "Come on, get in here," he ordered Murtough, pointing to the tonneau of his machine. Murtough climbed in and found himself sitting by a stranger, also masked, who shoved a gun into his side. The leader turned to the man who remained in the road. "You guard the girl and the driver until I get back." He leaped into the seat beside Murtough.

"Now, you thick head," he said curtly, "here's a through ticket to Chicago and $250. That's enough for you. And take it from me you'd better start in carrying a hot. You haven't got brains enough to be a crook. This train stops here in five minutes. I'll take you to the steps of the car and unless you want to be carried in a box you'd better hop that train and stay there."

"Who are you?" demanded Murtough.

"Just a friend of yours," replied the man as he slipped off the mask and faced Murtough.

"Schermer!"

"You certainly didn't think I was going to let you get away with that five grand, did you?" sneered Schermer. "Why, you poor boob, you never had a chance. And so you won't think you have a chance, let me tell you that I've already tipped off Cloccker that it was you who gave us the information. I'm doing you a favor by sending you out of town."

"And listen, dumb-bell, you go straight when you get out there. Keep away from crooks, because you don't fit in."

At the station Schermer and Murtough stepped from the car just as the train came to a stop. Schermer took his arm as though he was a friend helping a sick man and led him to the train. At the conductor's office "All aboard!" he assisted Murtough up the steps of the car. Murtough passed within, bound for the west and a career, which, he decided in those brief minutes, would be honest from then on.

As Schermer's car drove back to Clarice he again slipped the mask over his eyes. He climbed in beside the frightened girl.

"Where is he? What did you do to him?" she cried.

"Oh, he's safe enough."

"You didn't hurt him?"

"No."

Schermer took her hand. "You're kind of a nice kid, you are," he said. Leaning forward he told the chauffeur to return to New York. As the car swung about Schermer asked: "Don't you know me?"

"Not with the cheaters en" pertly answered Clarice.

"How about it now?" Again the mask was removed.

"Gus!"

"That's me! You didn't think I'd let that cap get away with five grand, did you?"

"But what about me?"

"Oh, that's different. I'll take care of you, kid. How about a thousand now and some more when you need it?"

"Gus, you're the smartest guy I've ever met. You're the kind of a guy I could really love."

"Think you could, then let's go," he smiled and he counted out ten one hundred dollar bills. "Put that in the bank, kid, but remember there'll be more when you want it. Now let's stop off some place and get a decent dinner."

"Okey with me. I need food," accepted Clarice as she snuggled down in the seat against Schermer and sighed with relief.

Old Tom Kildare was the only person who inquired about the absence of Murtough as the days passed and no word came from him. Rory had learned that Murtough had been working with the Cloccker band, but he did not tell the truth to Sheila. Murtough had vanished. Why should he blacken the memory of the man more than his own actions had done thought Rory. But Old Tom persisted, and it was Devlin who told him all about Murtough one evening at the Club.

"Murtough was driving for Cloccker," Devlin told him "and he put over a double cross which cost Cloccker $150,000 in real stuff. Not only that, the double crossing dog let two of our men get killed on his account. If he ever shows his face in New York again Cloccker will get him and get him good."

This Kildare related to Sheila several weeks after Murtough had disappeared. The old man held no brief for Murtough now. He was a boaster and a braggart and a ne'er-do-well. He had deceived even his best friend, Old Tom himself. Sheila was a lucky girl to be rid of him.
